What is the role of men in addressing men's violence against women?

Professor Bob Pease, Chair of Social Work at Deakin University, asks this question in his recently published paper, Engaging Men in Men's Violence Prevention: Exploring the Tensions, Dilemmas and Possibilities.

He finds that the involvement of men in violence against women prevention movements has become institutionalised in the philosophies and policies of many international organisations. He notes some of the complexities and pitfalls of men's involvement in men's violence prevention and advocates some key principles for engagement of men in this area.

Professor Pease will address his paper at the forum. He will raise questions and encourage debate about the impact of increasing men's involvement in campaigns to end men's violence against women.

Professor Pease will be joined by a panel of experts from the field who will respond to issues raised in the paper.

This forum is the first in a series of events jointly convened by the Australian Centre for the Study of Sexual Assault and the Australian Domestic and Family Violence Clearinghouse.

To book your place at the forum, please RSVP by Thursday 13 November, 2008
